McNEILL'S CODE.

EXTRACTS FROM PRESS OPINIONS.

South Africa.

"Mr. McNeill's 'Code,' which is arranged to meet the special requirements of mining and metallurgical engineers, and all persons connected with mining enterprises, is a most valuable and opportune volume—valuable for the additions it makes to technical 'code,' and opportune, as it comes at a time when those additions are likely to be wanted. It is no disparagement to other codes, excellent as they are, to say that Mr. McNeill's is a first-class one, comprehensive and complete. Upwards of 45,000 code words enable the person using them to cover the whole range of the language, and when it is borne in mind that these ingenious combinations represent an average of eight words apiece, it will be seen that those whose misfortune in life it is to cable constantly, and to be cabled to without remorse and without relaxation, owe something more than a debt of gratitude to Mr. McNeill for the protection he affords their pockets. In addition to mining, legal and general phrases, there are sections devoted to numerals, measurements, weights, and currencies, and a schedule embracing the phrases required when surveying or reporting upon a mineral property. As an instance of how carefully and completely the compiler has done his work, it may be mentioned that there are ten pages of 'code' devoted to the subject of 'ore' alone. We consider that this most useful and indispensable book is further increased in value by the fact that the cipher words have been selected with a view to eliminate such as may be identical in their telegraphic signals, or are otherwise liable to error in transmission."

Mining World.

"We have carefully looked through this book, and are amazed at the patience, the thought, and the system which must have been devoted to its preparation. The work contains special features which we have not seen in others of a similar description.

"The arrangement is most ingenious and is well fitted to save both money and time. The work is in every way worthy of commendation."

Daily Telegraph.

"The Code is compiled in the order of the alphabet, and the selection of technical terms and sentences is marked by discrimination. Valuable suggestions are made for securing accuracy and for deciphering mutilated words when they occur."

Anglo-American Times.

"The volume, which comprises more than 800 pages, appears to us to be compiled with great ingenuity, and with a thorough knowledge of the requirements which a similar work has to fulfil, and even a cursory examination will impress one with the fact that those who use it will be able to reduce the cost of cabling to the smallest possible dimensions, We are of opinion that the new Code compares favourably with any other used at present."

The Code has already been extensively adopted in all the more important mining centres throughout the world, including Australia, India, South Africa, and the United States.

GIFT OF

DEAN FRANK H PROBERT

MINING DEPT.

PREFACE TO TERMINAL INDEX.

The mutilation of a cipher word takes place, for the most part, either with respect to its initial or terminal syllable. Inasmuch as the cipher words are arranged in Parts I. and II. of McNeill's Code in an absolutely alphabetical order, provided the TERMINATION only of the word is affected, very little inconvenience is experienced, but if the COMMENCEMENT of the word is incorrectly transmitted much valuable time may be lost before the precise cipher word is located. To meet this difficulty, and assist in quickly determining the possible alternatives of any mutilated word, the Terminal Index has been compiled. By its aid, together with, on the one hand, either a little discrimination of the Morse signals involved, or on the other the context of the message already translated, the actual cipher word originally sent can almost invariably be found.

BEDFORD McNEILL.

McNEILL'S CODE.

EXTRACTS FROM PRESS OPINIONS.

Glasgow Herald.

"Is a very elaborate work, manifesting a vast amount of painstaking and care. It should prove of great service to engineers, mining directors, bankers, stock brokers, solicitors, and indeed to all business men."

Morning Post.

"Of the many publications designed to meet such requirements, none is more complete, is more conveniently arranged than McNeill's Code, which, while primarily intended for use in connection with mining affairs, really covers nearly every possible contingency that is likely to occur in any mercantile or financial relations. This admirable Code is the work of Mr. Bedford McNeill."

Financial News.

"McNeill's 'Mining and General Code' appears to have been carefully compiled. The author knows his subject, and his experience in this respect has been turned to good account in his book."

St. James's Gazette.

"The book as a whole is by far the most complete thing of the kind which has yet been published, and bears ample testimony to the thorough grasp of his subject which Mr. McNeill has acquired. The volume, which is arranged in a clear and convenient form, will be a valuable addition to the office library of all who have business in the mining world."

Financial Times.

"Mr. Bedford McNeill has produced an elaborate Telegraph Code, which includes the technical terms and sentences required by the mining, metallurgical, and civil engineer, by the mine directors, and by those connected with the direction or management of mining and smelting companies. The Code is the outcome of considerable industry and ingenuity. It will undoubtedly prove very useful, and a source of much economy to the classes for whom it is designed."

Industries.

"Mr. McNeill's work, covering 807 pages, and containing 45,767 phrases, will undoubtedly be warmly welcomed by those connected with the direction of mining Companies. The author's ripe experience and high professional qualifications as a mining engineer are evidence of the accuracy of the technical terms, whilst the financial part of mining and the needs of the financier have not been neglected. The Code contains a very complete schedule of the phrases likely to be required in reports upon mineral properties. Mr. McNeill's compilation is undoubtedly the most complete technical code existing, and, as a striking example of industry, patience and skill, is deserving of unqualified praise."

Electrician.

"More than usual care has been taken in the selection of the code words, which from a casual survey, appear less liable to telegraphic error than is frequently the case."

McNEILL'S CODE.

EXTRACTS FROM PRESS OPINIONS—Continued.

Engineering.

"Some idea of the scope of the McNeill Code will be appreciated when we state that it has about 45,000 phrases, with separate code words . . . . Many other items make the work of great utility."

Capitalist.

"Such a book pays its own cost very quickly by the economy of the Code. It ensures safety and secrecy in correspondence, and saves time. Mr. McNeill is well known in the City as a practical [illegible] a useful guide."

"The [illegible] luced a work which certainly [illegible] compiled, for it is excellently [illegible]

"The p[illegible] of much thought, aided by a p[illegible] come Mr. McNeill's Code as one [illegible]

"The C[illegible] erned with mining enterprise, w[illegible] dealers, &c. The work is divi[illegible] over 44,000 mining, legal, and general phrases; while the second part includes numerals, measurements, weights and currencies. A schedule is also added, embracing the phrases likely to be required by surveyors, when called upon to report on a mineral property. Prefixed to the Code are some useful suggestions for the avoidance of error in cipher messages."

Mining World.

"Certainly the McNeill Code is far and away the most complete that has been submitted to us, and embracing a range of over 45,000 cipher sentences covers every conceivable mining and general business contingency in which we have tested it. We cannot understand how anyone connected with mining, finance, or business generally can be without a copy."

Extract from "Engineering and Mining Journal," New York.

"As to the merit of the McNeill system itself, little need be said, since it is universally recognised as the very best, and is already widely used. All Telegraphic Codes have the same purposes—to save costs in telegraphing, to ensure secrecy in confidential correspondence, and to avoid liability of error. This particular system meets these three requirements in a superlative degree. The author, who is thoroughly conversant with the needs of mining engineers, metallurgists, civil engineers and their clients, has included, one would think, about all the phrases likely to be needed.

"Taken altogether, I have no hesitation in saying, after a very careful examination of the system, and some knowledge of its practical working, that all mining men, engineers, directors of companies, bankers, brokers, accountants, financiers and merchants—in fact, all who have business to transact at a distance—will do well to use the McNeill Code."
